Anne Schönharting HABITAT

© Anne Schönharting, „Peggy and Bernd Skodzig“, from „HABITAT“, 2012-2022

Anne Schönharting spent ten years photographing people in their flats in the Charlottenburg district of Berlin. Her subtly composed images present us with the protagonists and their apartments in wondrous, sometimes almost cinematic situations. Women, men, couples, families, students, children – all in their very own style. At times only the glimpse of an empty room, a window, or a door tells us about the people living inside and the constellations of their shared life.

Here the flat becomes an individual stage, a place of self-expression and confirmation of social position. In her text on the accompanying book, Inka Schube writes: “If one wanted to interpret these pictures as studies of habitus, for example, in the sense of Pierre Bourdieu, or even as visual psycho-sociograms, one should not disregard the fact that they are first and foremost Anne Schönharting’s pictures: It is her aesthetic practice, her pictorial will, that shapes and selects images from the representational intentions and possibilities of her subjects.”

And yet the artist is not only describing a social field. Taken as a whole, Anne Schönharting’s photographs create a fascinating atmosphere that allows us to experience a world of its own somewhere between fantasy and reality. Everything is bathed in the sheen of the unusual, which sometimes takes on aspects of the bizarre.

Anne Schönharting (*1973) has been a member of OSTKREUZ – Agentur der Fotografen since 1999. She concentrates on portraits and documentary photography. In addition to her personal long-term projects, she also works on commission for national and international clients. In 2020, Hartmann Books published her award-winning first book, The Legacy, an exploration of her family’s colonial past.
