Milan Koch's Territorium is a subjective examination of the city as living space and the contrasts that arise from urban coexistence. Breaking through comfort zones, in a series of unfiltered and authentically charged snapshots the artist documents the traces that both the city and its inhabitants leave behind through their interaction. Territorium is a contemporary document of a space whose state is that of permanent change. Though the pictures were taken in Berlin, their language is universal.

Street scenes, corner pubs, terrible weather, colourful characters, wastelands, and Bruegel-like scenarios—Milan Koch finds his motifs everywhere, on the street as well as in private spaces, photographing whatever he finds characteristic of living space, the city, and its inhabitants.

In so doing, he combines reflections on the city with which he is familiar with the search for concrete symbols characteristic of the urban experience in general. The series of works on display aims at an honest approach to the familiar which neither denies the alienating nor ignores the typical. Taken between 2019 and 2021 the photographs thus not only reflect an idea of the city formed by the artist but serve as references to it as well.

Milan Koch (1991*) graduated in 2021 from the Ostkreuzschule (Ostkreuz School of Photography), where he studied with Ludwig Rauch. As mentioned above, his work primarily focuses on his surroundings and on living space. He currently lives and works as a freelance photographer in Berlin.
